LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- ◆ Become familiar with the concept of reflective space, including how different factors facilitate or inhibit its development
- ◆ Understand the clinical applications of reflective space in individual, group and institutional work

ABOUT DSPP

The Dallas Society for Psychoanalytic Psychology (DSPP) is a local chapter of the Division of Psychoanalysis, Division 39, of the American Psychological Association. Founded in 1983, DSPP directs its efforts to exploring and promoting psychoanalytic theory and its applications as a basis for understanding human experience and for various forms of psychotherapy. DSPP's members come from a number of mental health fields and include counselors, nurses, physicians, psychoanalysts, psychologists, social workers, and students. DSPP emphasizes the application of psychoanalytic theory to a variety of clinical settings.

WORKSHOP LEADER

Robert D Hinshelwood, MD

Dr. Hinshelwood is a British psychoanalyst whose work has extended the thinking of Melanie Klein and Wilfred Bion. As an individual psychoanalyst he has studied individual development and as a group and institutional consultant he has explored how the group facilitates or inhibits this development. He has worked in some of the premier institutions in Britain during the introductions of NHS, (their version of HMOs) and has actively helped institutions develop the analytic space necessary for psychotherapeutic work as well as to analytically understand themselves as an institution. He will be helping us to understand how reflective space can be developed and enhanced in our individual, group, and institutional work.

Dr. Hinshelwood is the author of numerous books and of over one hundred academic articles and book chapters. He has spoken extensively throughout Europe and North America and is the Clinical Director of the Cassel Hospital in London. Dr. Hinshelwood is a current editor of the International Journal of Psychoanalysis. He is an international authority on Kleinian theory.

Case Presentation

Carolyn M Bates, PhD

Dr. Bates is a private practice psychologist in Austin, TX. She received her doctoral degree in Counseling Psychology at the University of Texas at Austin. Dr. Bates has spoken extensively about the issue of sexual impropriety in the therapeutic relationship, and has authored a book on this subject.
